Confession of the Delaney Murderers.

Confession of George P. Beale.

[illegible]

[illegible] Mr. Beale [illegible] the body. [illegible]

[illegible] We reached the gate, Beale [illegible] on the outside. The intention was to call the old man out, catch and tie him, and then get the money. I called him out. Baker was to catch him, and then I was to assist in tying him. Baker had set his gun by the fence. When the old man came out, he had a knife in his hand. Baker, seeing it, started to run toward his gun. As he ran, I thought it was his intention to shoot, and halloed to him not to shoot. But he, misunderstanding me, thought I said "shoot," instead of "not shoot." I halloed to him three times not to shoot, but he said he thought I said "shoot" every time. The first shot struck him in the left breast, and he fell on his hands and knees. Baker then shot at the dog. I think a scattering shot from the charge intended for the dog struck the old man in the head. I ran and caught the old man, and asked him if he would have some water, but he did not speak. He died almost instantly. I then drew my pistol and told Baker his time had come, for I intended to kill him then and there. He asked why I told him to shoot then. I saw his mistake, and told him better. He fell upon his knees and cried like a child.

I laid the old man straight, and [illegible] his hands. By that time the little boy unlocked the door, which the old man had locked when he came out, and went into the house taking the dog with him, and locking the door after him. We tried to push the door open, but could not. I picked up a stick of wood and broke the door in. I broke open one trunk and found some money, and [illegible] I had some more money. Baker went up stairs, and he did not find any money. I did not go up stairs. We then left for town. I told the boy to go to David Delaney's in the morning, and left him.

We went to the house, as sworn to by Hendrick [illegible] I went on foot, Baker [illegible] on the horse. We came home, as sworn to [illegible] Baker drinking some of the [illegible] Saw [illegible] Davidson's line, as sworn to in court. When we came to the creek, where one witness said there was a rail broken on the fence, there Baker brought his horse [illegible] to Strong's pasture, and we went down the creek to an old cabin. There I gave Baker some money—five hundred dollars [illegible] I was afraid to give him more, as he was somewhat under the influence of liquor. We then came a short way together, and I left him and went home.

When I got home the folks had gone to bed, it was between nine and ten o'clock. I went to the back door to wash, but could not find any soap. I crossed over the street to [illegible] and washed back of Wagner's paint shop, then went home. By this time my folks had gone to bed. I knocked at the door. Mrs. [illegible] got up, lit the lamp, and opened the door and let me in. I looked in the glass and saw some blood on my face, went to the back door and washed, came back in the house again, [illegible] talked awhile with my wife, then went to the kitchen and ate some bread and butter, then went to get some brandy, walked up street a short [illegible] came back [illegible] then went to bed.

My usual time of getting up in the morning was six o'clock. [illegible] morning [illegible] I [illegible] and down the pavement in front of my saloon. I unlocked the door, went in and locked the door after me, for the purpose of keeping [illegible] Dutch [illegible] and made a fire.

[illegible] that was [illegible] and [illegible] watch [illegible]

[illegible] E. an told me that I. R. Moores [illegible] gone over the long bridge to look for the money. He said Dray had told that he had seen me go over the bridge the Saturday before, with a box, which he thought had twelve or fifteen thousand dollars in it. He then asked me if there was any money over that way. I told him there was not. He then asked me where there was any money, and I told him up this side of the creek. He asked me what kind of money it was. I told him twenty dollar pieces. He said that was good, he was afraid there were some of those [illegible] square fifty dollar pieces. He wanted me to turn Caton and Curl off, and said they would get all the money, and then I might hang and be d—d; that all they cared for was the money, and not for Baker or myself. I was afraid of Logan at the time, but not of Caton & Curl. I [illegible] after that [illegible] opinion of Caton.

The next day, Wednesday, I gave Caton new directions and a diagram of the place where the money was. After that, he and Curl both told me that they had gone as directed and found the money, and had brought the cigar box, that it was in, broken it in small pieces and thrown it in the mill race.

Up to this time, I had told Caton that there was no other money, but he was not satisfied, and did not believe me. On Thursday, Caton and Logan came to the jail. Caton went in the cell with Baker, Logan into my cell with me. Logan, somewhat under the influence of liquor, said to me, as soon as we entered the cell, "Now, d—n you, you are guilty; tell me where every dollar of the money is." I got up, took hold of him, and told him that if I had anything to kill him with, I would take his life in less than a minute. He then tried to snatch at [illegible] and said it would take money to do anything with my case, that those small scatterings did not amount to anything, (making gestures with one hand over the [illegible] door). He then said he could do anything if he had money, and wanted to know if I could not give him four or five thousand dollars. I told him that he was drunk, and I did not want to talk with him. We went out of the cell. Caton [illegible] the [illegible] door two or three times while he and I were in, inquiring of Logan if he was not ready to go, and showing signs of uneasiness. Caton went out of the jail before Logan, and told the Sheriff that he had enough of that [illegible] stuff. These were my first suspicions of Caton. I believe he thought I was telling Logan where the money was. After they were gone, I told the Sheriff that my attorneys were throwing off on me. He said he thought not. I told him (Hendrick) that I had a great notion to turn all of my attorneys off, and go before the court without an attorney.

About this time, I told my lawyers that I thought I had better make a full confession, give the Delaneys the money which was justly theirs, [illegible] and bring myself before the people just as it was, and to the mercy of the court; but they would not hear to such a thing. They said they would hack me clear if they had to tear down the jail, and told me never to confess anything; that they could bring me out with money, if nothing else.

I told Caton about some money, which I will speak of hereafter. Caton very often came to the jail for no other purpose than to tell me that the people were ready to mob me at any time, if they could get one word of evidence that I was guilty, they would hang me, and him with me.

Now something about my trial. From what my lawyers told me, I made no calculation of my trial here, for they told me there would be no trouble in getting [illegible] so there were no preparations made [illegible] and I never knew any better until a few [illegible] before the trial commenced. [illegible] When I went into the court-house for [illegible] they told me that they had papers made out for me to [illegible] until the [illegible] term of court, [illegible] had to me for Baker. I refused to consent to it unless they would get me [illegible] Baker. So I was forced to trial, as I said before, [illegible] and after [illegible] was passed, I think that about the last words that was said to me at the court-house by Caton and Logan were about money, that thirty thousand dollars. They talked to me separately, and wanted me to tell them all about the money [illegible] some six or seven years ago, about [illegible] Delaney's money. That [illegible] I do not [illegible] But there is something that he swore that was not true. He swore that there was [illegible] any difficulty between him and myself, only something about rent and dividing the [illegible] It was known by the neighbors that we had a difficulty about family matters, and he knew it when he swore otherwise. It [illegible] memory was so good as to remember everything that was said about old man Delaney's money, he could not forget that, unless he thought he would get the money then he did at [illegible] I speak of this to show what excitement, prejudice and hatred will lead a man to do. Farewell, Parrott, my last word to you are these: If ever you expect to enter the gate of heaven, you must learn to be a good man Monday as well as Sunday.

[illegible]

[illegible] I. E. Parrott [illegible] between him and myself,

Let me here say something about one of those strange kind of preachers. That is a Mr. Dray, of Salem, who was once a [illegible] Methodist preacher. But, poor fellow, he has fallen from grace, even far below grade. This man did not swear in court, but caused a great excitement throughout the town and country. He reported that he saw me on the same day of my arrest, over the long bridge, with a box under my arm, which he thought undoubtedly had money in it—twelve or fifteen thousand dollars. He does about twenty [illegible] about the sum as they are about [illegible] That amount of money, in gold, would be a very good load for a man to carry in a box under his arm. This is a positive falsehood, and Dray knew it was when he was telling it, and I am well satisfied that the people think so now, for it is well known that this Dray never tells the truth when he finds a lie will answer. He will not only lie, but will take things that do not belong to him. It is well known that two thirds of the wood that he burnt this winter, he took from D. W. Jones' and my wood shed when we were asleep. It was my usual custom to go once every day to the new grist mill and get a basket of shavings to start the fire in the morning. That day, as I was going after shavings, Dray walked with me from my house to the blacksmith shop, on the corner, between my house and the mill. I had a basket on my arm, and Dray knew I was going after shavings. One more word, Dray, then I am done with you. Your religion may do such men as you to live by, but it will not do for a good man to follow. I tell you when you come to die it will not be worth [illegible]

There is another preacher that had something to say about this matter—Mr. Walrod, who lives in Salem, and is in good standing in the Methodist Episcopal Church at this time. He pretended to be out in the country looking for a horse; but that was not the case. Instead of looking for a horse, he was stealing a horse, which he did from Mr. Thomas Cross, a well known citizen of Salem. He stole the horse, brought it to town, cut its mane and tail off, put his brand on it, and then sent it into the country to pasture. Mr. Cross found out the truth about the matter and went and told him that that horse belonged to him. He said not, and talked very saucy. Cross told him if he did not produce the horse very soon he would put the law into force against him. He soon brought the horse, gave it to Cross, and was glad of the chance. At the very time, and at the same place, that this preacher stole this horse, he told a Mr. Harpole that Baker and I were guilty of this robbery, and had, no doubt, got a large amount of money; and some day we would be turned out of jail, and the sheriff would come out with a large amount of money. I do not speak of these preachers with any degree of disrespect toward the Methodist or any other church. I do it to show how differently a man will act from what he talks. These men should not be a disgrace to the church or preachers of any denomination but to themselves only. They should bear their sins and answer to God for the same.

One or two more witnesses that I wish to speak of: First, a Mrs. Greenwood. She swore that I told her that I would go and rob old man Delaney of his money, if I could get any one to go with me. I think that is not true. I am certain it is not so. I think that she was a good deal like Dray; wanted to tell something, and that was the best story he could fabricate. She does not have the best name for truth and veracity amongst those that know her. She is considered, by those who know her best, to be an obscene woman.

One more witness that I wish the people to know who she is and what she is, and that is a Mrs. M. J. Pomeroy from Walla Walla, an old resident of Salem. This woman's evidence was in reference to an anonymous letter that was left on her husband's work bench. The letter was found by Pomeroy, shown to I. R. Moores and others, and written by an unknown person. The sum and substance of that letter was a large amount of money belonging to an old [illegible] and wanted Pomeroy to go with him and rob him of his money. Mrs. Pomeroy testified that I told her, when we were gathering strawberries, that I wrote that letter, and wanted her to persuade Pomeroy to go with me and get the money; but she refused to do so, and threatened to tell her husband; he was no such a man, and he would do nothing of the kind. She also said I told her that I had reference to old man Delaney and his money. This evidence is false, and I will give a few facts to prove it so. First, she swore that she liked me very well, and I came to her house afterward, sometimes in the evening, but always some one with me. I wish such was the case, but am sorry to say it is not so. Better for me if I had never gone to her house. It is well known that many gentlemen of this town went to see her of evenings alone, when her husband was gone. I could name some of them, but they are well enough known. About the time this letter was left on the work bench, this Mrs. Pomeroy got badly stuck after a Mr. William Pettyjohn, and he promised to run off with her and marry her. They had all the arrangements made and the time set for their escape. The arrangement was, that she intended to poison Pomeroy and her children beforehand. She did poison her children. One died, and the other two came near dying. The way I came to find this out, I went to her house one evening and found this man Pettyjohn in bed with Mrs. Pomeroy. There is another gentleman, but I will not mention his name. He is a young married man in the mercantile business, has a partner, and owns the half of a brick store on Commercial street, Salem. Mrs. Pomeroy told this mercantile gentleman that I had done her a great wrong when she was a girl, and before she was married, and she intended to have revenge if it took her the last days of her life. They all [illegible] wished to have before the world. I sent Caton to see this man. Caton said that he told him he would not come before the court, and if I forced him to come he would swear something against me. This woman swore in [illegible] that she had me in her power. Pomeroy and his wife were sent for at Walla Walla to swear against me. Pomeroy told William Dalby, a well known citizen of Salem, before he came down from Walla Walla, that he and his wife were going to Salem to get revenge from Beale.

He told [illegible] that I was the cause of [illegible] his wife when they lived in Salem. [illegible] Mr. Pomeroy [illegible] and Mrs. Pomeroy [illegible] why did not they [illegible] letter? [illegible] honest man in Oregon that [illegible] she was friendly with [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] First, the [illegible] in twenty dollar pieces, and the old [illegible] dollars, Baker [illegible]

the box. As I said before, Caton was the only one that I told where the money was. Caton and Curl told me that they had got that money, and had found it just as I had told them. Caton told me in the presence of Curl, that he had the [illegible] old dollar in the race or creek, I do not remember which, but one or the other. I often spoke to Caton about that money, and told him not to disturb it, and I never knew any better until Judge Strong came to the jail, in company with Logan, the first week of the court, and said Logan had spoken to him to assist in my trial, and wanted to know if I could secure him in his pay. I told him I could for any reasonable fee. Before he left the jail he said he would come back the next day and see what kind of arrangements could be made. But I have never seen him since. Before leaving the jail, Logan whispered to me and said, he had told Judge Strong that he thought I could arrange to pay him some four or five hundred dollars. I asked Logan if he thought that [illegible] The next morning Caton came to the jail and said that Strong was doubtful about his pay, and that that thirty thousand dollars must be raised; that Strong had been making inquiries, and found that my land [illegible] judgment for as much as it was worth. I told him I would have to make use of some of that [illegible] hundred dollars. He then said, they made [illegible] about the money, that the [illegible] between Logan, Curl and himself! This was the first that I knew that that money had been disturbed. I spoke sharply to Caton and told him that he had no right to disturb one dollar of that money. He said nothing farther about the money, and left the jail mad. The next thing that I heard of Judge Strong, he had left and gone to Portland.

Since my confession, I told the sheriff and John Davis where the money was buried. They went to the place, taking with them Geo. A. Edes, and found everything just as I had told them. Some [illegible] paper was found on the ground that had been in the cigar box, but the box and money was gone.

Now, something about this thirty thousand dollars, so often spoken of. This is all a fabrication of my own. As I have before said, my attorneys, like everybody else, thought there was a large amount of money somewhere, and money was what they wanted. I first told them the truth about the money, but they did not believe me. I thought that by telling them of this money they would attend to my case better, expecting they would get more money. I told Logan and Caton that Baker knew nothing about this money; that I got it when he was not in the house. I told them that when we left the house, Baker went direct to the horse, and that I took a circuitous route to a place I had prepared beforehand. I told them I had dug a hole, carried away the dirt, and brought stone to fill up the hole, instead of dirt. I first told Caton about this supposed money and afterwards told Caton and Logan together. Logan wanted me to tell the place, so he could send a man by the name of [illegible], that he had brought up from Portland; said the man was well acquainted with the Delaneys, and I think he said he was out at Delaney's at that time. I told him that the money never could be found unless I could go myself, and if I never got clear, the money would never be found. He said the squirrels would dig it up. I told him about bringing the stone and filling the hole with it. It was proven in court that both our tracks went the same direction from the house to the horse. Caton acknowledged in the jail that the above statement was true. That shows that money matter to be false.

To show the great anxiety of my attorneys to get the money, I will here state one thing. They told me that they had got two respectable citizens of Salem to swear that they saw me in town between six and seven o'clock in the evening, on the 9th of January. I did not believe any such thing; I knew it was false when I heard them mention the men's names. Whenever they desired me to tell them where the money could be found, so they could go or send for it, I got rid of them the best way I could. The first week of court, Logan and Caton came and told me that those two men would not come before the court unless they got big pay for it, and that beforehand; that they could nor would not stand the censure of the people unless they got the money first. They told me that one of those men said that if I would give directions where to find the money, they would raise it, and this man would take it to San Francisco.

When I first made this confession, my attorneys were at the Yamhill circuit court. I sent Sheriff Hendrick and William Delaney to see them, and tell them what I had said about the money. They (Hendrick and Delaney) say that when they first spoke to the attorneys (Caton & Curl) about the money matter, telling them that Beal and Baker had made a confession, and had somewhat implicated them with receiving what money they took from Delaney, and that they (Beal and Baker) did not wish to get their attorneys into a difficulty, but wished them to come to the jail and talk the matter over before the confession came before the confession came before the public, Curl replied that that was all right: that they would make it all right; and then Caton spoke and said, excitedly, that they got no money; that Beale and Baker were telling d——d lies, or something to that effect. Then the conversation stopped between Caton and Curl and Hendrick and Delaney.

The next day Hendrick and Delaney returned to Salem, the attorneys (Caton and Logan) coming with them. Curl went to Portland. Caton and Logan came to the jail. Logan said he got some money, and it was mine. Caton denied that he had raised any money. Before he left the jail he said he had some two thousand dollars of my money, but had not appropriated one dollar of it to his use. He would not say much about anything. When I asked him a question, he would refer me to Mr. Logan. This conversation was in the presence of George A. Edes, William Delaney, and the sheriff. Caton and Logan then set about to embitter the people against me, telling that which would suit their case best, and published an article in the Argus, which they wanted to appear as an editorial. I will say before God and man that it is false throughout, and one of the most abominable things that ever appeared in any paper. Not only did they publish this and other falsehoods, but changed an article to suit their own case, that I sent to the Argus for publication. Caton, after telling every one that would listen to him, that our confession, in reference to the killing of Delaney and the money, was false, now comes to the jail and says to me that he did not wish to do me any harm; that he was willing to do anything for me he could; that all he wanted of me was to say that I told him that that money belonged to me; that the way the thing was it put him in an awkward position before the people, that if I would say that I told him the money belonged to me he would do all that he could to help me.

I have had something to say about Sunday [illegible] I am sorry to say, Tom, that you were at one time, a very religious preacher of this kind. You are the [illegible] and some [illegible] and every one [illegible] have been gotten and false. You have not only [illegible] betrayed me, but you have done the [illegible] my wife. You cannot betray any farther; but persist in telling the most barefaced [illegible] that your ingenuity can fabricate.

Since we have been in jail, all kinds of persons [illegible] and for all purposes. Some [illegible] purposes, some for company, others [illegible] curiosity. Persons that have [illegible] us [illegible] would come to see if we were [illegible] or had [illegible] some [illegible] African [illegible] that had to be locked in iron cells with [illegible] and chains [illegible] at our persons [illegible] and gaped, [illegible] if we were to break jail, the town [illegible] and [illegible] places that [illegible] money would be robbed and the people murdered. [illegible] have come on the [illegible] side, stood [illegible] and looked through the grates [illegible] and hideous [illegible] they [illegible] thinking [illegible] they would be devoured [illegible] come [illegible] the jail [illegible] and sympathized [illegible] believing that we were human beings and [illegible] that God might have mercy on our souls. [illegible] Mr. [illegible] old man Durbin [illegible] Donald [illegible] and some few other gentlemen, have [illegible] kind and good to us, and [illegible] our distressed condition.

[illegible] Mr. Waller, Mr. Dickinson, and the [illegible] have been our principal advisers [illegible] They are of different churches [illegible] I think all of them right. I differ with them all. They have their opinions; I have mine [illegible] to believe with them. [illegible] We had a jail [illegible] I think the court and pros[illegible] [illegible]

it was the opinion of every one that he was not to blame; that I had persuaded him; that I laid the plans. I will say that Baker's statement where it differs from the one written by me, is not true. He must have been so drunk at the time that he did not know what occurred, or he made the confession for some other purpose than the one stated. He says I shot three or four times in the house. I will say [illegible] if you can find any bullet holes in the house [illegible]

Samuel H[illegible]k [illegible] has been a humane jailer. I have found him to be a gentleman in every respect. He has always been good and kind. Our living has been as good as the market could afford, and we have had a clean comfortable bed. He did for us every favor, great or small, that we would ask, and a great many that we did not ask. I will say that I think he did everything in his power to make us comfortable. He always talked kind and pleasant. I have never heard him speak a cross word since I have been in jail, and I must acknowledge that I have given him some cause to do so. He has treated my wife with the greatest kindness, giving her every privilege that the law would grant. He is a man that has a good heart and tender feelings. [illegible] own brother. Mrs. H[illegible]k's conduct toward my wife has been more like a sister than otherwise, ever greeting her with kind words and good feeling. I have not language at my command to express my thanks and gratitude for your goodness toward my wife and myself. May God bless you, may He bless you abundantly for your goodness toward Martha. I hope you both may live a long life and a happy one. And when the strong arm of [illegible] comes, bringing the message of Death, may you be prepared to go to that place where there is a never ending bliss, is my humble and sincere prayer. May God bless you and yours. [illegible]

I can say that I have been treated kindly by every one about the jail. My best respects to Billy Barker for his kind and gentlemanly treatment.

It is generally customary for persons that commit crime after being convicted to make confession, repent and ask forgiveness of their God, and to warn the people against such things. I do not offer myself as a pattern of morality to give good counsel to any one, but I would say to every one particularly to young men, beware of [illegible] and low company. Guard strongly against such things. And if such a thing as an unlawful crime should ever enter your mind, cast it off, get rid of it as soon as possible. Honesty in mind [illegible] is the best policy. It may be hard for some to be honest, but stick to it and you will come out right in the end.

Confession of George Baker.

The reasons for making this confession are these: first, that Beale, my accomplice in the murder, has written and is now having published a confession of the murder which is not true in many respects, and I have [illegible]

THURSDAY MORNING, MAY 18, 1865

A Defective System.

Before the final dissolution of the Southern Confederacy, some of the rebel leaders [illegible] possessed [illegible] the doctrine of State Rights was a [illegible] that instead of being a [illegible] in which a National sentiment could be [illegible] utterly subversive of all [illegible]. The [illegible] which they [illegible] were attributed by them [illegible] consequences of the adoption of the doctrine of State Sovereignty. This was a point for which they had always contended, and by which they pretended to justify their right [illegible] the Union. The attempt [illegible] resulted in their [illegible] and they ascertained that the [illegible] of their weakness.

This much they might have learned from Washington, Hamilton and Madison. But they disregarded the warnings of those who had tried a system similar to the one they persisted in adopting, and rejecting all experience, madly strove to establish a government on a foundation which could never stand.

The Democratic party of the North pledged the same doctrines. The theory of State Rights, under the guise of which this rebellion was begun, and under the operation of which it still by an inherent weakness is still held by a party that hopes to gain possession of the Government. With such a fearful experience as this country has had, it can never adopt such an unnatural [illegible] of government as that which traitors have advanced, and which the party that sympathizes with them would force into our national creed.

In a Lowell Institute lecture the distinguished Superintendent of the Museum at Harvard University expressed a wish to visit the Andes that he might verify some of his theories regarding the glaciers. Nathaniel Thayer [illegible] a munificent benefactor of the college, was present and has since proposed to Professor Agassiz to go to South America, offering to pay his expenses and those of as many assistants as he may choose. The Professor gladly availed himself of the offer and will start this week, probably from New York, taking with him eight young men as students and assistants. He will go direct to Rio Janeiro and examine the mountain ranges in the southern part of Brazil and in the neighboring provinces.

The Democratic papers are agitating the question of negro suffrage with remarkable vigor. It might be discreet, to say the least, to let that question alone until the people are willing to discuss it. The Democratic party, so far as we know, has not gained much in the long run by its continual worry about negro slavery, soldiery and suffrage. The negro has proved rather an overmatch for it. The spectacle of a tussle between these athletes will be as entertaining as any other P. R. show, but the result of former encounters makes us apprehensive that the so-called Democratic party will "go to grass" as usual. Better keep it in training awhile yet, at any rate until it is firm on its pegs.

We are born to trouble, and we may depend upon it while we live in this world we shall have it, though with intermissions; that is, in whatever state we are, we shall find a mixture of good and evil. And therefore the true way to contentment is to know how to receive the uncertain vicissitudes of life, the returns of good and evil so as neither to be exalted by the one or overthrown by the other, but to bear ourselves toward everything which happens with such ease and indifference of mind as to hazard as little as may be. This is the true temperate climate fitted to be nature and in which every wise man would wish to live.

A Washington letter writer asserts that on the day before the recent movement on Richmond was begun, Mr. Lincoln, who was then at City Point, sent as a present to Jeff Davis the identical long cloak and Scotch cap in which, in 1861, Mr. L. is said to have traveled from Harrisburg to Washington. The cloak is large enough to cover the whole family of the fugitive President.

A CROWD TO WITNESS THE EXECUTION.—Beale and Baker were hung about half past 12 o'clock yesterday. A multitude was assembled from the adjacent country to witness the spectacle. The unhappy men died without a struggle. We publish their confession this morning.

Gen. McClellan tells the [illegible] that he has no expectation of a speedy termination of the war which is devastating his unhappy country. It never would end if he was at the head of our armies, certainly.

APPOINTMENTS.—Gov. Gibbs has appointed A. W. Adams of Boston, Commissioner of Deeds for Oregon, and [illegible] Ferry, of this city, Notary Public.

The entire population of all the States and Territories [illegible] belonging to Uncle Sam, is 67,[illegible]

The rebels have drained the cup of humiliation, but have left us the lees.

We take the following from the Walla Walla Statesman:

On Thursday morning, May 4th, the dead body of a man was found in the [illegible] about a quarter of a mile [illegible] Walla Walla. The body was entirely naked, and gave evidence of having been in the water some fifteen or twenty days. There were no marks of violence on the body [illegible]

They enjoy the good will [illegible] of the best men of the country [illegible] what can be done in Portland [illegible] arrives here to make [illegible] will show a still greater [illegible] carried on in Portland, but [illegible] the present is dull.

[illegible] OF THE "BOYS."—When the steamer [illegible] Oregon City yesterday [illegible] struck up a "call" [illegible] and by the time the boat reached [illegible] there was a delegation of the Department [illegible] the "boys," who had been up [illegible]. The procession formed and [illegible] and other streets, to the engine house [illegible], headed by the Mechanics' Brass Band [illegible] Band, and the delegation were [illegible] with the courtesies of true [illegible]. They report having [illegible] fell time.

[illegible].—Real [illegible] of the Third Ward [illegible] that through the neglect of the person whose duty it is to attend to the reservoir of the Water Company [illegible] allowed to flood the streets [illegible] washing [illegible] newly graded parts, and doing other damage. [illegible] was found [illegible] through [illegible] of the city, [illegible]. The attention of the Superintendent is called [illegible].

[illegible] MATTERS.—Recorder McCoy disposed of four [illegible] by fines and imprisonment for disorderly conduct. George Jones paid $12, and was [illegible] hence. John Thomas, J. Collins and Patrick [illegible] committed to jail. The following arrests were [illegible] day, and the parties will appear [illegible] By officer Brannan, Frank [illegible], D. Vargaly and P. Spalding, for fight [illegible], John Thomas and John Doe, for being [illegible] sleeping on the street.

[illegible].—The use of Salmon street [illegible] is now easily seen. Schooners, [illegible], spiles, lumber, and sand in the vicinity [illegible] away as soon as landed to various parts [illegible].

[illegible].—Officer Brannan yesterday arrested [illegible] villain by the name of Frank [illegible], on a [illegible] committing rape upon the person of a little girl [illegible] The [illegible] was perpetrated on Taylor [illegible], First and Second streets, several days [illegible].

[illegible].—The worthy steward of the steamer [illegible] has placed us under obligations for a fine [illegible] salmon. We appreciate the favor and extend [illegible] thanks.

[illegible] GENIUS AND HEROISM. Indeed, how [illegible] we may be struck with the sparkling [illegible] of effect which follows the rare [illegible] practical force, we must not forget the [illegible] in human affairs of the ideal power [illegible] of the soul. These work creatively from [illegible] to mold character, not only inflaming [illegible], but touching the springs of pity, [illegible] gentleness and love—above all, [illegible] that wide-reaching sympathy which [illegible] out of the grit girded fortress of his [illegible] into the wide plain of the race. The [illegible] of these ideal powers is in genius and [illegible], which draw their inspiration from ideal [illegible] sources, and radiate it in thoughts [illegible] large and deeds beautifully brave [illegible] not merely exert power, they command [illegible]. If you are overcome by a man of grit, [illegible] makes you conscious of your own [illegible]. If you are overcome by genius and [illegible], you are made participant in its strength, [illegible] overcome only to invigorate and uplift [illegible] on their gathering disciples to the [illegible] they have in view, by making it an object of [illegible] as well as duty. Their power to allure [illegible] attract is not lost even when their goal is [illegible] or the cross. They never, in transient [illegible] and pain, lose sight and feeling of the [illegible] and bliss inseparably associated with good [illegible] virtue; and the happiest death beds have [illegible] on the rack or in the flame of the [illegible]. And they are also, in their results, [illegible] influences; for they break down the [illegible] separate man from man—by magnanimous thought or magnanimous act—shame [illegible] bitter personal contentions, and flash the [illegible] of a common nature into [illegible] hatreds and oppositions. As grit [illegible] society into an aggregate of strong [illegible] persons, genius and heroism unite them [illegible] humanity. Thus, not many years ago, [illegible] about the higher law and the [illegible] fugitive slaves. It was argument [illegible], passion against passion, [illegible], grit against grit. The [illegible] virtue and vice, justice and injustice, [illegible] and inhumanity, were as different as [illegible] controversy had not been between man and [illegible], but between man and cattle. There were [illegible] among the combatants that they had the [illegible] reason and the common [illegible] of a [illegible] nature. Then came a woman of genius, [illegible] to credit the horrible conceit that the [illegible] was essential, who resolutely believed [illegible] the human heart was a unit, and whose [illegible], piercing the mist of opinions and [illegible] in the deep and universal [illegible] of human action the exact point where her [illegible] tell; and in a novel, [illegible] annals of literature for popular effect, shook [illegible] public reason and public conscience of [illegible], by the most searching of all appeals [illegible] heart and its imagination.—E. P. Whipple.

[illegible] small a portion of our life it is that [illegible] enjoy! In youth we are looking forward to things that are to come; in our old age we are looking backwards to things that are gone past; [illegible] manhood, although we appear indeed to be more occupied in things that are present, yet even that is too often absorbed in vague determinations to be vastly happy on some future day, when we have time.—Bacon.

Cure Your Cold, Save Your Lungs.

NEWELL'S

PULMONARY SYRUP

HAS

CURED THOUSANDS!

And it will Cure You!

"A Cough is generally the effect of a Cold, which has either been improperly treated or entirely neglected. When it proves obstinate there is Always reason to fear the consequences, as it shows a weak state of the lungs, and is often the forerunner of Consumption."—[Buchanan's Domestic Medicine.

STOP THAT COUGHING!

Some of you can't, and we pity you. You have tried every remedy but the one destined, by its intrinsic merit, to supersede all similar preparations. It is not surprising you should be reluctant to try something else after the many experiments you have made of trashy compounds vaunted on the public as a certain cure; but

Pulmonary Syrup!

Is really the VERY BEST remedy ever compounded for the cure of Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Asthma, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis and Consumption. Thousands of people in California and Oregon have been already benefited by its surprising curative powers.

WHAT KILLED HIM?

Dr. Hall, in his "Journal of Health," speaking of the death of Washington Irving, asks the above question, and adds: "He might have remained with us for many years to come had it not been for advice, kindly intended, no doubt, but given in thoughtlessness and reckless ignorance.

He Had a Cold!

Which, by some injudicious prescription, had been converted into asthma." Let me say to Dr. Hall that that "prescription" was not

NEWELL'S PULMONARY SYRUP.

KEEP IT IN THE HOUSE, use it freely, give it to your children upon the slightest indications of a Cold, and you will think and speak of it as all do who have become acquainted with its merits.

LUNG BALSAM!

The Remedy for Curing

CONSUMPTION, COUGHS, COLDS,

Asthma, Croup,

Diseases of the Throat, Bronchitis, Pains and Oppression of the Chest and Lungs, Difficult Breathing and all the Diseases of the Pulmonary Organs.

ITS ACTION IS EXPECTORANT, ALTERATIVE, SUDORIFIC, SEDATIVE, DIAPHORETIC AND DIURETIC, which renders it one of the most valuable remedies known for curing diseases of the lungs. It excites expectoration, and causes the lungs to throw off the phlegm or mucus, CHANGES THE SECRETIONS and PURIFIES THE BLOOD, heals the irritated parts, gives strength to the digestive organs, brings the liver to its proper action, and imparts strength to the whole system. Such is the immediate and satisfactory effect, that it is WARRANTED TO BREAK UP THE MOST DISTRESSING COUGH IN A FEW HOURS' TIME, if not of too long standing. IT IS WARRANTED to give entire satisfaction even in the MOST CONFIRMED CASES OF CONSUMPTION. IT IS WARRANTED NOT to produce costiveness (which is the case with most remedies), or affect the head, as it contains no Opium in any form. IT IS WARRANTED TO BE PERFECTLY HARMLESS to the most delicate child, although it is an active and powerful remedy for restoring the system. THERE IS NO REAL NECESSITY FOR SO MANY DEATHS BY CONSUMPTION, when ALLEN'S LUNG BALSAM will prevent it, if only taken in time.

Sold by all Druggists. Price $1 per bottle.
